CEMETERY SUNDAY: On this Sunday 27th July, we gather in quiet reflection at St Brigid's Cemetery to remember those who have gone before us – loved ones whose presence shaped our lives and whose memories continue to live in our hearts. Though they are no longer with us in body, their spirit lingers in the stories we share, the values they passed on, and the love they left behind. In remembering them, we honor their lives and the moments we were privileged to share. Let us carry forward their legacy with kindness, compassion, and courage. May their souls rest in peace, and may we find comfort in the enduring bond that even death cannot break.

Reflection: There are ways of living other than the often-destructive patterns that people find themselves stuck in. Even we can have patterns of behaviour that we'd be better without them. It might involve doing something or neglecting to do something, but it doesn't have to be this way. When someone would let you down, another of my mother's sayings was "people make their decisions child." In other words, they just didn't forget – they just decided, or decisions were made for them to do something else. Christianity is essentially not an imposition: it's a way of being free of not being a prisoner and of living differently. This is given expression in the following tale of two masons during the Middle Ages, performing the exact same tasks, who are asked about their work. "Don't you see? I'm cutting stones," said the first one, whereas the second took an entirely different view: "I'm building a cathedral."
